Stage 1 Debate: Climate Change (Emissions Reduction Targets) (Scotland) Bill

There might be some question about whether climate change is the most urgent problem we have to tackle. There's really no question that that if it isn't tackled - whatever other problems we are addressing will eventually (but not that eventually) cease to matter all that much.

Global temperatures have already increased 1°C above pre-industrial levels, with damaging impacts being felt around the world. Climate change makes storms like Cyclone Idai, which devastated parts of Mozambique, Malawi and Zimbabwe recently, much more likely. (About which btw)

We urge MSPs to support the Bill at this stage but then go on to make it stronger, a lot stronger. Here's the SCCS briefing on the Bill

UNISON Police Staff Scotland

UNISON Police Staff Scotland, has criticised the Scottish Parliament's Justice Committee because it is unable to understand the extent of police officers back filling police staff jobs, due to lack of data. The criticism was made in response to the report on post-legislative scrutiny of the Police and Fire Reform (Scotland) Act 2012.

The report acknowledges that police staff jobs are being back filled by police officers in order to meet financial savings, but says it does not know the extent of problem because they have not been given the information they need to assess it.

Read David Malcolm, Deputy Police Staff Branch secretary and Gerry Crawley, UNISON Regional Organiser responses here.

This comes at the same time as the revelation of a massive shortfall in the capital budget for Police Scotland meaning promised IT and infrastructure projects will not go ahead.

UNISON and Cornerstone to meet at ACAS on pay

UNISON is delighted to announce that ACAS has confirmed that Cornerstone has agreed to meet with us on pay. This will be formal ACAS conciliation aimed at ending the ongoing pay dispute, and will take place on 29 November 2018. Our letter to Cornerstone asking them to join us at ACAS can be viewed here.

New College Lanarkshire earns living wage accreditation

New College Lanarkshire has officially been named an accredited living wage employer by Living Wage Scotland. This means that everyone working at the college – regardless of whether they are direct employees or third-party contracted staff – receive a minimum hourly wage of £9.

UNISON reps at the college, Moira Jarvie and Collette Bradley, said "UNISON is pleased that New College Lanarkshire has now achieved living wage accreditation in line with the national agreement with support staff unions to do so"... read more here.

Unfortunately, Kelvin College and Clyde College in Glasgow, together with Borders College and North East Scotland College still have outsourced workers who are paid at a rate less than the living wage. Our Briefing sets out how the Scottish Living Wage can easily be extended through procurement.
